not given travelling allowances for journeys consequent on transfers from one station to another in the exigencies of service. The Government of India have recently adopted a rule that menial servants should not be transferred save in exceptional cases and that when so transferred they should be given travelling allowance under the Civil Service Regulations.

2. The Comptroller proposes that such a rule may be introduced into Mysore. The subject was considered in Council and their recommendation for the introduction of a similar rule here may be approved.

ave the honour to state that under Section II of Chapter XXXIV of the Mysore Service Regulations regulating the travelling allowance of Officers for journeys on transfer, no travelling allowance is admissible to an officer in Inferior service, on change of appointment, except under the special or general orders of the Government. And this power of sanction reserved by Government has been delegated to the head of only one Department, viz., the medical and that too only in the case of the Travelling allowance bills of Compounders on transfer. But it is seen from the Travelling allowance bills received in this office that in some departments of Government, inferior servants are frequently transferred from one District to another, and sometimes to far off Districts. And it is but fair to presume that such transfers involve extra expenditure on these poor low-paid officials. At the same time, it may not be desirable on the part of the Government to absolutely prohibit the transfer of such officials.

The general rule in British India on the subject of Travelling allowance to this class of officers on transfer, was till the middle of last year, just the same as it is in Mysore now. But since then, the Government of India have ruled that Inferior servants should not be transferred save in exceptional cases in which there may be special reasons for a transfer, and they have so altered the original article in the Civil Service Regulations that when transferred under such circumstances, the officers in Inferior service get travelling allowances for such journeys. The change in the rule is, I think a very desirable one in as much as it expressly provides against unnecessary transfers without at the same time entailing hardship on the officers transferred, and I therefore request that you will be good enough to obtain the sanction of the Government for its adoption in the Mysore Service Regulations.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant.

Letter No. 7667—T. A. 94, dated 28th June 1909, from the Comptroller to Government on the subject of the transfer of inferior servants and the grant of travelling allowance to them for the journeys consequent thereon :—

"I have the honor to state that under Section 11 of Chapter XXXIV of the Mysore Service Regulations regulating the travelling allowance of officers for journeys on transfer, no travelling allowance is admissible to an officer in inferior service, on change of appointment, except under the special or general orders of the Government. And this power of sanction reserved by Government has been delegated to the head of only one Department, viz., the Medical, and that too, only in the case of the travelling allowance bills of compounders on transfer. But it is seen from the travelling allowance bills received in this office that, in some Departments of Government, inferior servants are frequently transferred from one district to another, and sometimes to far off districts. And it is but fair to presume that such transfers involve extra expenditure on these poor low-paid officials. At the same time, it may not be desirable on the part of the Government to absolutely prohibit the transfer of such officials.

The general rule in British India on the subject of travelling allowance to this class of officers on transfer, was, till the middle of last year, just the same as it is in Mysore now. But since then, the Government of India have ruled that inferior servants should not be transferred save in exceptional cases in which there may be special reasons for a transfer, and they have so altered the original article in the Civil Service Regulations that, when transferred under such circumstances, the officers in inferior service get travelling allowances for such journeys. The change in the rule is, I think, a very desirable one inasmuch as it expressly provides against unnecessary transfers without at the same time entailing hardship on the officers transferred, and I therefore request that you will be good enough to obtain the sanction of the Government for its adoption in the Mysore Service Regulations."

ORDER THEREON.—Under the circumstances brought to notice by the Comptroller, the Government of His Highness the Maharaja are pleased to sanction the following alterations :—

(1) Article 615, Mysore Service Regulations—the exception to it—to be cancelled.

(2) Article 606, Mysore Service Regulations—the words "in Superior Service" in the first line of this article to be omitted. The following sentence to be inserted at the end of the article : "Inferior Servants should not be transferred, save in exceptional cases in which there may be special reasons for a transfer."

2. The Comptroller is requested to issue the necessary corrigenda to the Mysore Service Regulations.
